

Decision 2/2008

Decision of the Director of ECDC on the Centre's Copyright policy/ Copyright licensing policy/ Copyright notice

1. Copyright policy and copyright licensing policy for ECDC Public Documents

The ECDC has copyright in the documents that it produces; those categorised as 'Public' are made available to the public either as hard copies or electronically. The copyright notice attached to ECDC documents states that reproduction of the document is permitted for non-commercial use only and provided the source is acknowledged. Any person or company wishing to reproduce and/or distribute such a document for commercial purposes must request a licensing agreement from the ECDC.

(A) Non-commercial reproduction

Reproduction and/or distribution of a whole or part of an ECDC public document is permitted provided that:

- The ECDC is acknowledged as the source of the document in the material reproduced and/or distributed.
- The reproduction is for non-commercial use only (e.g. recopying of material to individual 3rd parties for their personal information only).
- Any 3rd party receiving the material is informed that these conditions also apply to them and that they must comply with these conditions.

(B) Commercial Reproduction

As a general rule, any reproduction and/or distribution of an ECDC public document carried out in the course of a business/professional activity (whether or not carried out for profit) will be regarded as commercial reproduction. This is the case for example of reproduction of documents for use/dissemination in connection with public conferences, commercial training programmes, papers, journal articles...

Applications for licensing of ECDC public documents for commercial use and the granting of copyright licences will be considered on a case-by-case basis. A request containing full details of the proposed reproduction should be sent to ECDC- Health Communication Unit.

Where commercial reproduction concerns inclusion of ECDC public documents in a publication (whether in paper or electronic format), a copyright licence may, where appropriate (e.g. for reasons of inclusion of multiple documents or large scale reproduction and/or distribution), be granted by means of a formal agreement. In other cases (e.g. individual requests to translate a single document, one-off requests for limited reproduction of documents for use as training materials), any copyright licence will normally be granted by means of a letter of permission from the ECDC.

A separate licence is required per publication; a single title distributed in different formats is treated as more than one publication. Thus if a title is available both in paper format and on CD-ROM, two separate licences will be required.

In principle licences granted by the ECDC will be royalty-free.

Standard Formal Licence Agreement (see annex 1)

The period of a standard licence is one year beginning on the date of signature of the agreement.

The licence covers all public documents (within the type(s)/group(s) licensed) published by the ECDC during the one-year term of the contract. However, previously published documents (i.e. those dating from 1995 up to the date of signature of the agreement) may also be licensed if requested.

All licensees will get documents in electronic format only (download from website or sent by email).

Under the terms of the standard agreement, the licensee must deliver to the ECDC, free of all taxes and delivery charges, five complementary copies of the work, for ECDC's use, or give ECDC complementary access to their on-line service, as appropriate.

This policy will be published on the ECDC website

2. Copyright and Licensing policy for Eurosurveillance journal

Eurosurveillance is a leading independent European scientific journal devoted to the epidemiology, surveillance, prevention and control of communicable diseases, published by the European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control (ECDC). The online journal is also available in a quarterly print edition, which compiles material from the monthly and weekly releases.

In order to enable reproduction and distribution of these documents ECDC needs confirmation of the copyright situation of the document and agreement from the copyright holders (in principle the authors).

To this effect authors are requested to accept the terms of the “agreement with Authors” (link) by returning it signed at the time they send their contribution/article. ECDC accepts a signed PDF document sent by email.

This policy will be published on the Eurosurveillance website.

3. Copyright notice on ECDC website

In line with the policy described here before, it shall be as follows:

© European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control (ECDC),

Except where otherwise stated, reproduction of documents/information for personal use (i.e. for educational purposes, research, private study or internal circulation within an organisation) or for further non-commercial dissemination to end users is authorised subject to the condition that appropriate acknowledgement is given to the ECDC and to the source.

Reproduction for commercial purposes is subject to the conclusion of a licence agreement with ECDC. Applications should be addressed in writing to ECDC- Health Communication Unit.

General terms and conditions

1. Except where otherwise stated, and subject to the conditions hereinafter specified, the ECDC hereby grants to the Licensee a non-exclusive free of charge licence to download from the ECDC website —(<http://www.ecdc.europa.eu>) —, to publish and to further disseminate, for commercial purposes, throughout the world, in whole or in part, in all editions, forms and media (hereinafter called ‘the Product(s)’), the original language editions of the ECDC public documents and information (hereinafter called ‘the Information’) displayed on ECDC website.
2. For redissemination of third-party textual or artistic material (illustrations, photos, audio, video, etc.) appearing in the Information, and identifiable as such, permission must be sought directly from the copyright holder(s).
3. This Agreement is concluded for an initial period of one (1) year beginning on the date of its signature by the ECDC. It shall be tacitly renewed for an undetermined period unless either party gives written notice of termination to the other party three (3) months before expiry of the initial period. It may not be otherwise modified except by further formal Agreement in writing between the parties.
Either party may terminate the Agreement any time after the initial period subject to three (3) months' notification in writing. In case of termination, no compensation whatsoever may be claimed by either party.
4. The Licensee undertakes:
 - to print at a suitably prominent place on the Product(s) the appropriate acknowledgement of the copyright holder of the Information and the source as follows (translated into the relevant language):
[title of the Information],
© European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control (ECDC)
Source: www.ecdc.europa.eu,
 - not to make any changes of substance to the existing texts of the Information or the illustrations contained therein without the express permission given by the ECDC in writing;
 - include the date of the publication in question, if applicable;
 - with effect from receipt of written notification, to cease immediately further disseminating any Information for which the ECDC reasonably believes there may be a violation of third-party intellectual property rights.
5. The Licensee shall take the entire responsibility for the Product(s), and the ECDC shall accept no responsibility for the consequences arising from any improper use thereof, or any action taken by the Licensee’s customers.
6. The ECDC may not be held responsible, and the Licensee may not claim damages, in case of disruption of ECDC website.
7. The Licensee may not assign the rights and benefits conferred by this Agreement without the written approval of the ECDC.

8. Should the Licensee violate any of the terms of this Agreement and not rectify such violation within one (1) month of having received written notice to do so by registered letter sent to him at his address given at the head of this Agreement, the licence hereby granted shall forthwith lapse, and all rights conveyed by it shall without further notice revert to the ECDC.

10. The rights and liabilities of the parties, in so far as they are not expressly covered by this Agreement, shall be established according to the law of Sweden, and any dispute, whether as to the express terms of this Agreement or otherwise, shall be determined by the courts of Stockholm.

Annex 2

Agreement with Authors

Article title: _____

[The organisation/expert/scientist (hereinafter called 'the Author') providing the Eurosurveillance editorial team with information/documents for publication in the Eurosurveillance (website and print format) shall accept the following terms and conditions:]

1. The Author warrants to the European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control/Eurosurveillance that the information/document is original to himself [herself] and is not a violation or infringement of any existing copyright or licence or of any other right of any other person or party whatsoever, and that it contains nothing libellous, defamatory, obscene or in any other way unlawful or misleading.
2. The Author cedes to the European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control/Eurosurveillance the non-exclusive publication rights of the information/document, for dissemination throughout the world, for the full legal term of copyright, in whole or in part, in all editions, forms and media, and in any language, as well as the right itself further to license reproduction/translation thereof by third parties for commercial dissemination.
3. Should the information/document contain any third-party textual, graphic, artistic or other material, the Author guarantees that he has obtained prior permission from the copyright holder(s) entitling him to grant the rights referred to in paragraph 2 above.
4. The Author authorises the European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control/Eurosurveillance to accordingly adapt or modify the information/document whenever technically or graphically necessary.
5. If the copyright on the information/document is owned by several co-authors, the Author hereby declares to have obtained the previous consent of such co-authors to act on their behalf and assign to ECDC the rights listed in paragraph 2 above.
6. The Author accepts that the European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control/Eurosurveillance may not be held responsible for the timing of availability of the information/document on the Eurosurveillance website or for disruption of service, or for any improper use of the information/document by third parties.

I, the Author, acting in my name and on behalf of the co-authors, confirm that I accept the terms set out above.
